Molino - Airmen Peak - West Fork of Molino
2014/8/10
SCALE 1:25000
WGS 84
The West Fork of Molino is much more rugged than Molino with three major obstacles to bypass and a number of mandatory smaller scrambles. Be prepared - consider simply reversing your route down Molino Canyon if you are unsure if this is safe.
Airmen Peak
The line on the map is approximate at best - you need to be comfortable navigating off-trail and deciding the best path.
MC 04, 2.2 miles: Saddle.
First Falls - exit canyon to the left onto the cliffs.
MC 03, 1.5 miles: Leave Molino Canyon at this drainage - from this turn you should try to get to the saddle by the path of least resistance.
Bug Spring Trail
Second Falls - exit canyon to the right into a small drainage that leads back to the canyon.
MC 02, 0.7 miles: Drainage in Mountain Project Stonewall Approach.
Third Falls - exit canyon to the right looking for a faint trail that contours along the hillside to a debris chute/hillside back down to the canyon.
MC 01, 0.45 miles: The trail climbs away from the canyon and comes back into the canyon above the falls.
J BLT MC, 0.1 miles: Leave the Bellota/Arizona Trail on a well worn but unofficial trail.
Molino Basin Trail
Park in the Molino Basin Parking Area.
MC05, 4.8 miles: The canyon passes under the Highway, by several campsites and then a left onto the paved road - the paved road thru the Campground will take you back to the parking area.
Bellota Trail
Declination
GMN
GN 0.17° E
MN 10.11° E
Molino Canyon
Bug Spring
MT LEMMON
MOLINO BASIN
Old Prison Camp (Site)
Molino Basin
West Spring
Copyright (C) 2013